

Ford T 1923 (Center Door)

The telephone booth that made history.

This time capsule comes from Paramus, New Jersey, where its previous owner commuted daily to Brooklyn. The mileage? Just 9,800 miles over an entire century. Talk about a pampered life!

Even more remarkable—this car has had only two owners in over 100 years. That's a rarity in the world of classic cars.

Ford produced this unique center door body style between 1915 and 1923. Even back then, it stood out as an oddball. By the early 1920s, it was seen as outdated and even mocked as "the telephone booth." Ford eventually discontinued it—probably with a sigh of relief.

But as history loves irony, the models once laughed at... are now highly sought-after collectibles.

Look closely: it's a bit of a contortion act for the driver to climb behind the wheel. But the rear passengers? They enjoy a surprisingly roomy cabin. Clearly, Ford had its priorities.

The Model T isn't just a car. It's a legend. It put America on wheels, transformed economies, and revolutionized how people lived and moved.

And this one? Still standing proud, with its quirky center door and century-old charm.
